

BBC News published an article on March 8, 2017, entitled: “‘Rock star’ Archaeopteryx fossil heads for Japan.” It can be read here.

Archaeopteryx fossil from London's
Natural History Museum

This article shows how desperate evolutionists are to promote Darwinism. Archaeopteryx is one of their long-time icons. It is portrayed as a “missing link” between dinosaurs and modern birds. There are just a couple of problems with this. First, there is no evidence proving modern birds are descending from it. Second, its ancestors that scientists assert descended from it do not appear until millions of years after it! Unbelievable, isn't it?

“It has beautiful impressions of feathers and wings – like a bird. But then it also displays the claws, the long bony tail and the serrated teeth you would associate with dinosaurs.

No wonder Charles Darwin was so excited by Archaeopteryx.

Emerging just a couple of years after he published his theory of evolution, this specimen was just the sort of transitional form he would have expected to exist in the fossil record.”

Archaeopteryx is a creature that apparently became extinct. Millions of other creatures have become extinct. The fossil record shows the opposite of what Darwinism asserts. The overwhelming majority of creatures who have ever lived have become extinct, just like Archaeopteryx. Darwin's "tree of life" is thus turned upside down - by the fossil record!

Darwinistic evolution is promoted by "people who suppress the truth." They should "know the truth about God because he has made it obvious to them. For since the world was created, people have seen the earth and sky." Denying the very obvious evidence of creation by God, "they traded the truth about God for a lie" - macroevolution - "since thought it foolish to acknowledge God." (Romans 1:19-28)

Yes, "fools base their thoughts on foolish assumptions," like their assertion that Archaeopteryx is a "missing link" between dinosaurs and birds. (Eccl 10:13 NLT)
