

BBC has posted a new article claiming that a new “human-like species” has been discovered in South Africa, which they have given the name naledi. The discovery of 15 partial skeletons has led some researchers to conclude that may be a different species of human-like creatures than was previously known. From these partial skeletons pictures have been drawn showing what the researchers think these creatures may have looked like.

We knew Darwinian evolution was in “crisis” mode, but this discovery really takes the cake! Evolutionists don’t know what to make of it, or how to fit it into their theory. Why? Because it doesn’t fit (just like some other discoveries). Of course, artists can draw fictional images that fit whatever they want it to.

An artist’s conception of what they believe homo naledi may have looked like

But the facts are that these bones appear to be fully human. Look at the hands pictured in the article, for example. They look just like modern ones, but evidently an older person with arthritis. Look at some older people today, especially those who’ve done a lot of manual labor

- they are very similar to these curved fingers.

“God said: Let us make human beings in our image, after our likeness. Let them have dominion over the fish of the sea, the birds of the air, the tame animals, all the wild animals, and all the creatures that crawl on the earth. God created mankind in his image; in the image of God he created them; male and female he created them. God blessed them and said to them: Be fertile and multiply: fill the earth and subdue it. Have dominion over the fish of the sea, the birds of the air, and all the living things that crawl on the ground” (Genesis 1:16-28 NAB).

God created the first humans fully formed, fully human. They were able to understand complex speech, and instructions. Early humans were able to compose poetry (Genesis 2:22,23). They made tents and lived in them, and raised domestic animals (Genesis 2:20). Early humans built and played musical instruments, and forged instruments out of metals (Genesis 2:21,22). The earliest humans had bodies and brains that were just as developed as ours are today.

If scientists took the Bible seriously, they wouldn't have to keep revising their theories.
